

'An Estimate of the charges in coyning of copper money by the pound weight Averdupois'.

Author: Isaac Newton

Source: MINT 19/2/327, National Archives, Kew, Richmond, Surrey, UK

<327r>

An Estimate of charges in coyning of copper money by the pound weight Averdupois.

To be paid by the Mint-master to the Importer for the excess of Copper imported above the Scissel delivered back, about	} 18 ^d or 19 ^d
To be paid by the Mint-master to the Moneyer $1\frac{1}{2}$ ^d , Engraver $\frac{1}{4}$ ^d , Smith $\frac{1}{4}$ ^d , & two Clerks $\frac{1}{4}$ ^d , & to his Deputy & Assayer & for incidents in assaying & weighing, about $\frac{1}{4}$ ^d	} 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ ^d
To be allowed to the Mint-master for his own trouble & hazzards in taking care of the whole & being answerable for the same & accountable as Treasurer for this coynage	}

The Incident charges in setting up this coynage are to be born out of the profits of the coinage above the aforesaid charges, & may amount to four or five or perhaps six hundred pounds in repairing the buildings, fitting up the Offices & furnishing them with coyning tools & other things necessary.

This coynage not to exceed the demands of the people nor 40 Tunns per annum, & after four or five years to stop till further order. And the Importer to import copper in barrs of a due size & fineness as fast as it shall be demanded by the Mint Master & not faster.
